I saw the willows on both sides of the street dancing with the wind, but I knew that they moved with the force of the wind, and they could not move without the wind.

Are some people now like the willow twigs waving in the wind?

Our school is under a completely closed management, and only residential students are allowed to live on campus. I applied for a day study for some reasons, and I need to show my day study card to the guard when I pass the gate after school. As I cycled to the gate, I saw the guard waving at me. I got off and took out my pass, but he said, "I don't want you to show your pass. I remember you."

There were two things I admired about this doorman. One was how he remembered me among the many people who came in and out of the school every day. There were not many day students in our school, but there were some. Second, as a doorman, he knew how to get off the bus to show his respect for the school.

I went to the hospital for epidemic prevention, the doctor required taking blood to see if there was antibody, I saw the person taking much blood, then sat on the seat to wait. The man sitting next to me was an old man. He asked me, "Did you draw blood for money?" I said, "Sure, don't you want it?"

He said: "I am a veteran, do not want money, every month still have money to take, the government policy is good! The old man could not help praising it.

"Government policy is good!" It can be seen that the old man has a deep belief in the Communist Party. I think it is because of this belief that our country can develop so fast.

When I went to visit my neighbors, they were watching TV and saw some people commit suicide on TV. So my neighbor commented, "They are all useless people committing suicide."

I think of Qu Yuan and The story of Five hundred Men tian Heng, people have never said that they are worthless, but I still do not advocate suicide.

Tonight I went to the bath house to take a bath. I paid him to rub my back for me. He took it and asked me, "Are you a student?" "How do you know?" I asked rhetorically.

"Only students give money first," he said.

Admire.
