When I walk on the street, I see the spitting of people with no quality everywhere. I am very angry about it, but there is nothing I can do about it. All I can do is to write this article and talk about it with emotion.

When I went to the park, I found that the branches of some trees always extend towards the sunny places. Biologically speaking, this is the phototropism of plants. How about Philosophically speaking?

That's the way it should be: you should go where it's good for you. We should do the same as human beings.

As I sat in the taxi, I noticed that a hole had been burned in the foot mat by the end of my cigarette, which was lying next to it.

Smoking in the car is a kind of disrespect to the owner, leaving the butt in the car is more immoral.

As I drove to the countryside, I looked through the windshield and saw the trees on both sides of the road meet like two sloping straight lines at a distant point, a view that delighted me. I was even more excited by the sight of a flock of egrets in the moors, which pleased me; there are few wild birds in the fields now.

I went to buy snacks, I have a habit, that is to buy things to pay, when I finished eating ready to go, the stall owner called me, quite unhappy to say: "you have not paid it." I said yes, the stall owner either believe it or not, finally let me go.

'You haven't paid me yet, have you? This happens almost every time, and I've learned a lesson: pay after you've paid.

My mother and I went to buy an electric car. We looked at one shop, so called "shop around", and were about to look at other shops, but the owner was so good at talking that we were so impressed and we opened our wallets to him.

This shows how important it is to have a good mouth.
