My mother was cooking at home. She was cooking and there was no gas. She had to go downstairs and buy some food from a restaurant nearby.

Trust for customers is also the foundation of business.

I saw next door grandma's refrigerator changed, asked why, grandma said uncle moved home to take the refrigerator, she bought a new one. I think it means double money was spent, uncle spent the freight, grandma spent the refrigerator money, if grandma were to give money to uncle to buy a new one again, would uncle not have saved the money for the freight? Or uncle would have used his own money to buy a new one ah.

I was playing with a nANNAN downstairs with my uncle upstairs and opposite upstairs neighbor. Uncle suspected the heat, he took off his coat, nANNAN followed suit and took off his coat, which made us laugh. While laughing, I came to the conclusion that the biggest influence on children is often the adults around them, even if the influence is good or bad, and this influence often affects the child's whole life. Children always learn from adults, so adults should also teach others to let children have a good influence.

When a novel written by Jin Yong is released on the market, the local crime rate will go down. Because what the book promotes is righteousness, the author often gives a bad judgment and a bad end to the characters, even if they have been arrogant for a while. I also think that even the villain of society, when he sees this kind of novel, is worried about the good side in the battle between good and evil, and is elated by the evil failure. As time passes, you will have a correct value and moral outlook, and then will be a good person.

There should be more books of this kind.

In the middle of the road was a green belt covered with grass. However, there was no vegetation at the crossroad at the end of the road. Because there were a large number of people at the crossroad, some people got close to the crossroad and stepped onto the green belt. Consequently, the green belt became mud. However, far away from the crossroads, the road is green, which shows that places with more people do great damage to the environment, and the biggest damage to the environment is human beings. This is just a small miniature.
